Strategies that are based on the principles of applied behavior analysis (ABA) can be used to enhance the skill development of various individuals. Implementing interventions to increase appropriate social and academic skills can increase student achievement in other areas. This in person inservice will provide a basic/general overview of ABA strategies and principles and will present various interventions that can increase appropriate social and academic behaviors/skills.

Participants will gain knowledge and skills in:

1. interventions, based on ABA principles, that can be used to increase student academic skills;
2. interventions, based on ABA principles, that can be used to increase student social skills.

Note: It is strongly suggested that participants attend all three inservices in the ABA series; however, participants may attend each inservice individually. ABA Series Topic One and ABA Series Topic Two are being offered on March 14 and March 21, 2022.

This inservice is in person from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
