Do you have in class programs staffed by general education and special education teachers and if so, are your students getting the benefit of two certified teachers in your in class, or co-teaching program? Do teachers have the tools, knowledge and support to implement this program in an effective manner? Do your special education teachers feel like aides? How do you appropriately evaluate two teachers in one class? These questions and the following topics will be the focus of this online inservice: the reasons for implementing team teaching programs; the potential benefits and the significant challenges to implement in-class programs; and strategies and tools to support teachers in proactively providing substantive instruction within a co-teaching environment.

Participants will gain knowledge and skills in:

1. the role in the success of the co-teaching program;
2. identifying areas of success and challenges in schools;
3. how to appropriately evaluate co-teachers;
4. what is needed to move the vision forward, reactive to proactive.

This inservice is online from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m.
