Reviewing the New Jersey Department of Education’s guidance related to school reopening can be overwhelming, leaving many administrators with more questions than answers, especially when it comes to students with disabilities. This online inservice will review the guidance and best practices in terms of how a school district may proceed with its obligations to students with disabilities.

Participants will gain knowledge and skills in:

1. lessons learned from 2020 ESY programs,
2. safe transportation of special education students,
3. how to conduct evaluations post-COVID,
4. challenges associated with emotional and behavioral services for students with disabilities,
5. how to social distance and meet CDC requirements in the context of special education programming.

This inservice is online from 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m.
