Based on what educators already know to be the foundations for high-quality instruction, join this in person inservice on how to streamline efforts to work smarter, not harder. Educators will be encouraged to engage in a mindset shift that will benefit themselves and their students. Explore a framework to help each learner recover lost ground and make academic progress while accelerating learning for the upcoming school year. This is where accelerated learning meets intervention strategies that work for educators and their students.

Participants will gain knowledge and skills in:

1. developing a key pathway for redesigning lesson development and delivery,
2. aligning key assessments to vital standards to gain valuable data that can drive future instruction and allow for progress monitoring,
3. exploring a tiered framework for using instructional and intervention supports while accelerating learning,
4. understanding and examining the PDSA cycle with strategies for developing and sustaining continuous improvement and collaboration.

This inservice is in person from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
