In what ways and to what degree have children been affected by their experience during the pandemic? How will the answers to this question be used to inform your thinking as you plan for 2021-2022? More than ever before, teachers and leaders will need to use social, emotional and academic data to identify and address students' needs. During this online inservice, participants will learn how to elicit, utilize and integrate data sources for each domain in order to support student growth.

Participants will gain knowledge and skills in:

1. identifying sources of social, emotional and academic data;
2. integrating and using data sources to develop school-wide and individualized supports;
3. developing systems and structures to support the effective and efficient use of social, emotional and academic data.

This inservice is online from 1:00 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.
