This in person inservice is intended for administrators. Cultural competence allows us to interact effectively with people whose backgrounds are different from our own. It involves developing certain personal and interpersonal awareness and sensitivities, understanding certain areas of cultural knowledge, and mastering a set of skills that tap into students' strengths and make educational strategies more effective. This inservice will introduce participants to culturally responsive principles specifically geared for school administrators. Participants will be introduced to the cultural proficiency continuum, the social identity wheel, the concept of implicit bias, the impact they have on the academic and sociocultural learning and best practices in culturally proficient leadership.

Participants will gain knowledge and skills in:

1. exploring the concepts of cultural competence, cultural responsiveness and cultural humility;
2. understanding how our identities shape the way we see the world and how the world sees us;
3. using the cultural proficiency continuum to understand the varied responses to cultural change.

This inservice is in person from 2:00 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.
