This past year has shaped educators' understanding that all learning is social and emotional for each student. Heading back to in person learning, how do educators utilize more time in the school day to help each student become the best they can be? SEL advocates have always stressed the importance of spaces other than classrooms, i.e., the playground, lunch room, cafeteria, hallways, and after and before school programs. There are many spaces in and on the school campus that are ideal for bringing SEL to play! This online inservice discusses ways to refocus thinking and embrace answers to the question of how to create a place for every child to feel included, be seen, be active and build SEL skills in authentic experiences.

Participants will gain knowledge and skills in:

1. explore, demo and practice SEL games for each competency,
2. brainstorm and collaborate applications to attendees' specific needs and opportunities.

This inservice is online from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m.
